

Old Parliament House
Gardens
Rose Guide

Foreword

It is now three years since the opening of the reconstructed Old Parliament House Gardens. The roses have developed well and are now established, boasting a beautiful display of blooms throughout spring, summer and autumn each year. The Gardens have a wonderful ambience – one feels loved and embraced by nature as one moves through them.

Over these years, the Gardens have been visited and enjoyed by people in their thousands. Patrons of the Gardens may be seen regularly checking their sponsored roses and plaques which often celebrate a special occasion in their lives or commemorate a special person or persons. This can make their visit to the Gardens an emotional time as memories flood back.

To assist patrons and visitors locate roses in the Gardens, the National Capital Authority has developed an Old Parliament House Gardens Rose Guide. This comprehensive guide will prove invaluable when locating a sponsored or favourite rose.

I would like to wish all visitors and patrons many fulfilling visits to the Old Parliament House Gardens and hope that they will come away restored by this beautiful place.

Best wishes

History of the Old Parliament House Gardens

When the Provisional Parliament House (now Old Parliament House) opened in 1927, the surrounding limestone plains were windswept and pastoral. The bush landscape stood in stark contrast to the established lush gardens of the temporary Parliament in Melbourne.

Robert Broinowski was one of a handful of parliamentary officers who travelled from Melbourne to Canberra to staff the Provisional Parliament House. It was Broinowski's challenge to surround the Provisional Parliament House with gardens so that the parliamentarians would not miss the Treasury gardens near their former temporary quarters in Melbourne.

Hedges surrounding the Gardens were soon planted to mitigate the wind. Tennis courts, a cricket pitch and a bowling green were later established.

Robert Broinowski, as the Secretary of the Joint House Department of the Parliament, completed the overall layout of the Gardens between 1931 and 1938. Even in the Depression, when funds were limited, Broinowski pushed on and built the Gardens using donations from all walks of life.

Robert Broinowski's final lay-out of the Gardens consisted of four rose gardens. The Broinowski Rose Garden and Rex Hazlewood Rose Garden in the Senate Garden, and the Ladies Rose Garden and the Macarthur Rose Garden in the House of Representatives Garden.

Broinowski Rose Garden

The Broinowski Rose Garden was first conceived by Robert Broinowski in the early 1930s. The original 1930s formal design featured an unusual horseshoe-shaped layout and circular satellite beds.

Rex Hazlewood Rose Garden

Planted in 1931 the Rex Hazlewood Rose Garden is the largest of the Old Parliament House Gardens and the first to be developed. The Garden was designed by Rex Hazelwood, of Hazlewood Brothers Rose and Tree Specialists in Epping, Sydney, as the result of a meeting between Robert Broinowski and representatives of the National Rose Society of New South Wales.

Short of funds, Broinowski devised a scheme for Australians to contribute roses for the parliamentary gardens. Donations were received from staff of the House of Representatives, Senate, Parliamentary Library and Joint House Department together with parliamentary press reporters. Signs were erected to recognise the many organisations and individuals who had donated a rose.

Ladies Rose Garden

In 1933, Robert Broinowski asked Dame Mary Hughes, Dame Enid Lyons and other wives of parliamentarians to support the Ladies Rose Garden. They agreed, and soon Robert Broinowski commenced gathering donations of one shilling and fourpence per rose. Many women contributed roses for the Garden, in particular Hybrid Tea and Floribunda roses, which were popular as cut flowers.

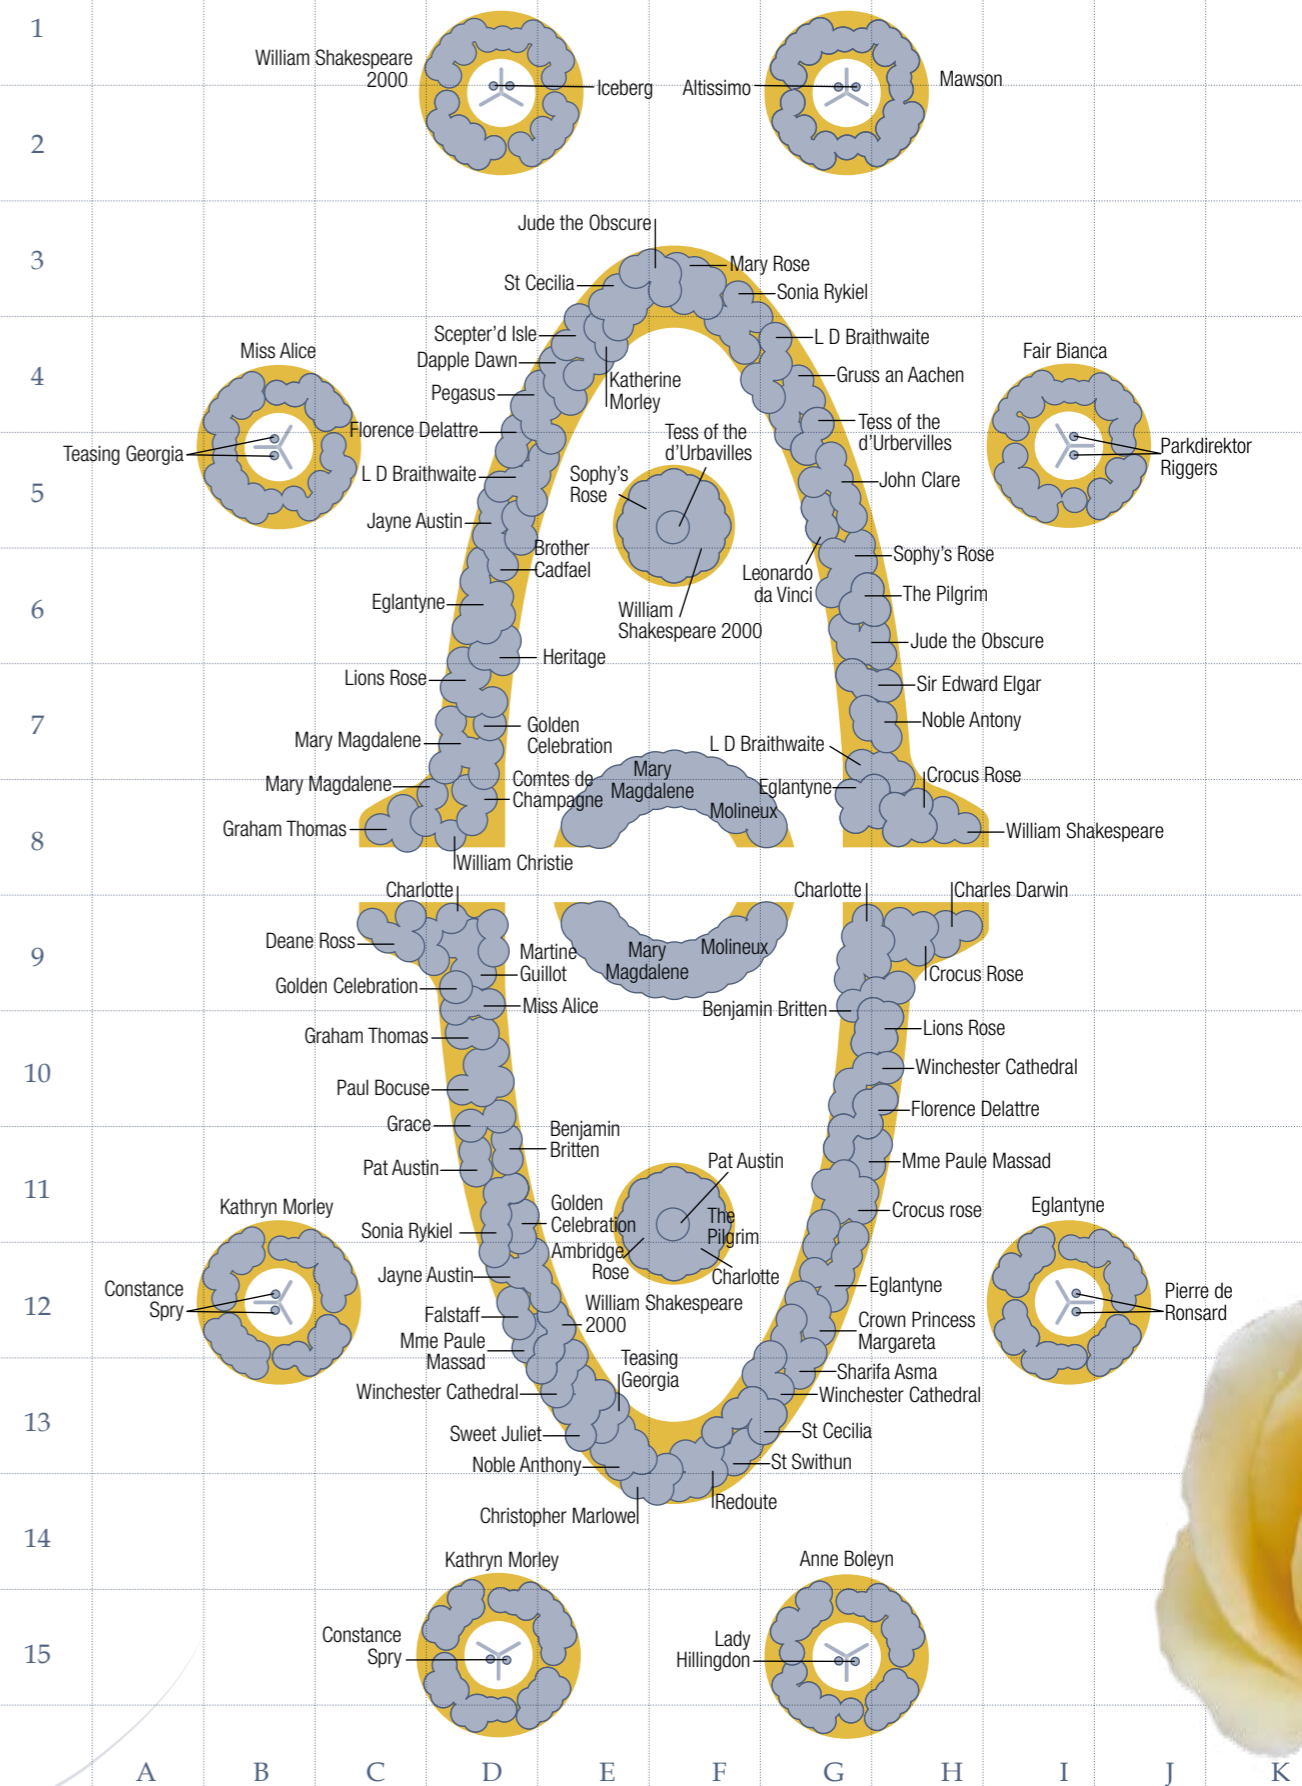

Macarthur Rose Garden

The Macarthur Rose Garden, planted in 1937, was the last rose garden to be constructed under the direction of Robert Broinowski.

Miss Rosa Sibella Macarthur-Onslow, great granddaughter of John and Elizabeth Macarthur, arranged with Broinowski to donate one hundred red 'Étoile de Hollande' roses to the parliamentary gardens. The gift commemorated the major contribution by John Macarthur to the breeding of merino sheep at Parramatta (Elizabeth Farm) and Camden. Broinowski arranged for the roses to be planted in a circular bed at the centre of the Macarthur Rose Garden.
